This free, non-accredited course is being offered by ACER in response to increased awareness of the need for effective mentoring in a variety of educational and work-based settings and as a consequence of the new Skills for Life professional development qualifications.

This course is valuable for:

- those new to mentoring;
- existing mentors who wish to further develop their mentoring practice;
- those looking for a stepping stone to an accredited mentoring course.

Using an interactive approach, you will:

- explore and apply principles of mentoring from a fundamental to a more advanced level;
- investigate theories of mentoring and link these to good practice;
- develop skills and understanding of reflective practice.
